BUILD UP CITY.

The campaign did not have very material effect on the business activities of Clarksburg, although the last two weeks of it marked to some extent a lull in business. The substantial nature of the city is such that it takes something extraordinary to stop the progress of the city. But we did suffer some along the line of getting new industries.

In other places as well as here the people had their attention considerably on the campaign and the outcome and were not thinking so much about new enterprises. As the result there was a dropping off in that line. Now, that the election is over and the future for four years at least is assured to be one of prosperity, it is opportune that our attention be turned to some extent in increasing our commercial and industrial activities. Efforts should be made to bring additional factories here because of the fact that commerce depends largely on pay rolls. The larger they are the greater the amount of business done.

There are several splendid factories here and they are helping wonderfully in the development of the city. But Clarksburg must be larger and greater and more industries are necessary to accomplish that result. Let every man put his shoulder to the wheel and make an attempt to interest outsiders in Clarksburg.

The building up of the city should now be the main song. Let every one help along and the result will be marvelous.

JOURNALISM IN MISSISSIPPI.

We suppose we shall be accused of professional jealousy, but we must admit that the praise of being sung in favor of the editor of the Mississippi Democrat makes us tired. The book is all to the good, but its author is very much to be pitied with us and it is our duty to our sensibilities to have everybody praising him up. Alexander the Great was a swindled runt with a biased shoulder blade; Napoleon looked a pigmy besides his marshals; General Jot Wheeler is not bigger than a peck of beans, but fights like a lion; and we ourselves are not quite up to the medium height and only weigh 128 pounds, in the shade. The editor of the Mississippi Democrat is not only a hampered down paperweight of a shrimp, but his very appearance and action belie his calling and his ability. He wears the furtive, restless look of a wild-casting moonshiner. His expression is dull and stupid, his attire a mass of meretricious even in the town which owns him as citizen; and without any desire to be personal, we must say that he is the sort of looking fellow in southwest Mississippi. The illustrations in the book flatter him grossly, which probably explains why they are there. It is said of his spouse that she married him so she could constantly be assured that there was one person in the world homelier than herself, but this may be malicious scandal. However, such is life. To him that hath shall be given, etc., etc.—Laurel (Miss.) Ledger.

Clarksburg is fast becoming known as the convention city of the state. Its central location, good transportation facilities, and excellent accommodations for the entertainment of visitors as well as its generous and hospitable citizens make a drawing card that other cities of the state are jealous of. We have been entertaining the Masons this week and they are loud in their praises of the reception accorded them. The Hotel Keepers' Association of West Virginia comes next week and the members of that organization who expect to attend will find their visit to the city will be a most pleasant one.

The organization known as the West Virginia Editorial Association seems to have gone up the flume. The association was to have met in Point Pleasant in June and from there a trip was to be made to the World's Fair at St. Louis. The meeting was postponed two or three times and then the members were so busy engaged in vying about in the political pond that they forgot all about the thing. The trouble with the West Virginia Editorial Association is that it has fatal paucity of editors and newspaper men in its membership. It needs reorganization.

What has become of the traders alley arcade movement? With all of Clarksburg's rapid growth there are some things that make it resemble an overgrown baby in clothes entirely too small to fit. Traders alley could be converted into a beautiful arcade that would be a credit to the city, an impetus to business and the everlasting pride of its citizens. All the movement needs is two or three prominent business men to lead it. It would be no difficult task to get the thing started towards a successful culmination.

The Harrison County Herald has been figuring quite prominently in the "Tall Timber" column of the Wheeling Telegraph of late. The "Tall Timber" column of the Telegraph is a section of the comic department that contains ludicrous clippings from country and back mountain exchanges for the amusement of its readers.

Editorial

Sparks

But Lots of Gray Matter.

The Clarksburg Telegram is forty-four years old. Yet it has no gray hairs.—Wheeling Telegraph.

It Do.

The political spark burned brightly in Clarksburg the other night. Taken more than cold weather to put a crimp into Republican order to there.—Wheeling Telegraph.

There Are.

There are a lot of fellows who haven't sense enough to lead and they are too stubborn to follow.—Fairmont West Virginian.

Hog.

Bring on that Prosperity!—Wheeling Register.
Read this—
America has claimed a new distinction among the nations of the world. It has tried off the tariff honors, for with only 7 per cent. of the world's population it has furnished 29 per cent. of the money laid away in savings banks.—Pittsburg Times.

Occasion For Thanks.

Four more years of Teddy—West Union Record.

So Say We All.

Senator N. B. Scott will be elected his own successor by the incoming Republican legislature without a dissenting vote. He richly deserves the honor.—Charleston Mail.

We Haven't Heard of Any.

No West Virginia editor has been so bold as to threaten to withdraw his deposit from bank and take them out of the reach of the tax commissioner.—Roanoke Central.

Crow Banquet.

A. E. Saunders, late Democratic candidate for secretary of state, has arranged to give a crow banquet, and he has issued invitations to a number of Republican friends.—Youngstown Telegram.

That's No Dam Lie!

The Ohio River Improvement Association hit the nail right square on the head when it said "dam."—Parkersburg State Journal.

Scott's All Right.

It is becoming very plainly apparent that Senator Nathan Bay Scott of West Virginia will have no opposition to reelection. He will be named for another term by the State legislature that meets in January at Charleston. Senator Scott is undoubtedly the most popular West Virginian before the public today. He has earned another term and will get it.—Grafton Sentinel.

In the Monkey Set.

They were limping last night at the Horse Show, for the news had just come across that King Edward has a sore knee.—New York Thriller.

The People Didn't.

You can not expect good government from a party that has been dead for thirty or forty years.—Parkersburg State Journal.

It Would and It Was.

If Emperor William's message, Tantum quod bonum felix tantumque sit populo Americano, had come before election, it would have been promptly nailed as a campaign lie. As it was, the chief result was more or less strenuous expressions on the part of the Associated Press operators.—Oil City Pizzard.

One Democrat Elected.

The whole country has gone Republican. Well, we did hear of the Democrats electing one man; it was a comfortable down in South Carolina. They did very well.—Upshur Republican.

Boost It Up.

A trolley line from Fairmont to Morgantown is again being mooted. It may be built, as we sincerely hope it may, but the chances appear against it. The backers of the plan profess to believe that it is one of the things that is to come before very long.—Morgantown New Dominion.

A BRIDGE OF HUMAN BODIES

Is the Actual Feature in the Remarkable Melodrama, "The Span of Life" to Appear Here November 23.

The deservedly long-lived and remarkable melodrama, "The Span of Life" will be presented at the Traders Grand opera house next Wednesday, Nov. 23. The author, Mr. Sutton Vane has written many successful plays including "The Cotton King" and "Humanity," but none have achieved as lasting a success as "The Span of Life." Whether this is on account of its excellent presentation, its interesting story of its unique and marvelous mechanical effects, or the human bridge, is difficult to determine. The management, however, in keeping the standard up to the original, deserve all the success they achieve. The famous Donazzetas are with the production. A "bridge of human bodies" is in itself a novelty, but when this human footway is suspended in mid-air across a raging cañon, the spectator is thrilled and astonished. This is an actual feature on "The Span of Life."

Will Serve Oyster Supper.

The ladies of the Altar society of the Catholic church, as previously announced, will give an oyster supper in Centennial hall Tuesday night, Nov. 22, from 5 to 11 o'clock. Oysters will be served in all styles. A sandwich and salad supper will also be served between the same hours and ice cream cake and coffee will be found in abundance. The small sum of 25 cents will be charged for supper. The proceeds will be for church purposes and the public generally is solicited to patronize the event. 17nov54

Paid Election Bet.

Charles Warfield and a fellow clerk at Viropo, attended "The Beauty Doctor" Friday night. They did so as a matter of compromise on an election wager. Warfield and the other fellow agreed that one or the other should convey the elder in a wheelbarrow from Viropo to Enterprise. Warfield, who bet against Roosevelt and who is a Democrat, lost. He did not relish the wheelbarrow task and so his proposition to bring the other fellow to the show and pay all "incidental" expenses as well as for the round trip was accepted.

Masons Have Gone.

Friday night marked the conclusion of the exodus of Masons from the city to their various homes in the state after the annual meeting of the Grand Chapter and Grand Blue Lodge. By Saturday morning they were all gone and which the yearly meeting is ended materially it yet lives in the hearts and memories of the Masons who attended it and will be recalled in future with pleasure.

League Thanksgiving Service.

The devotional service of the Goff Epworth League Sunday evening at 6:30 will be in the nature of a Thanksgiving exercise, when each member of the chapter will be called upon for a Scripture verse, and as a rule, to express thanks to the Creator for blessings experienced. The meeting will be in charge of Mr. C. W. Furies. The senior choir of the church will furnish special music, as indicated elsewhere in this issue.

Council Failed to Meet.

The city council failed to meet Friday night because of the lack of a quorum. Several councilmen, the mayor clerk and other city officials gathered but there was not the necessary number. So they concluded to meet in special session one night next week.

Assembly Club Issues Invitations.

The Clarksburg Assembly Club has issued invitations for its grand ball to be given in the Waldo hotel ball room on Wednesday evening, Nov. 23. It will be one of the brilliant social events of the season and those who have been so fortunate as to receive an invitation are looking forward to the affair with pleasurable anticipation.

Arranging For Poultry Show.

Arthur Sheets, of West Milford, was in the city Friday, looking after arrangements for the poultry show that will be given here next month. He is the president of the local poultry association. The next show promises to be even more successful than that given here last year.

Death of Colored Child.

Othel Harvid Jones, child of Charles A. and Alice Jones, colored, died Friday night at the home No. 430 Ben street, from diphtheria. The funeral occurred from the residence Saturday afternoon at three o'clock burial being in the Masonic cemetery.
